

Krystin Miller, MD is an Assistant Professor and Assistant Program Directory for the Emergency Medicine Residency Program at The Ohio State University. She is a graduate of the Emergency Medicine Residency Program at Ohio State and completed a Medical Education Fellowship. She is also the current Director of Resident Didactics, as well as the Director of Rotating Residents and Fellows at Ohio State. Krystin has a passion for teaching and graduate medical education and is pursuing a Masters of Education in Biomedical Sciences Education. In her free time, she enjoys spending time with her husband Brady and their three children on the family farm.